

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In an image reading apparatus which scans an image while displacing the relative position between the image on a predetermined medium and an image sensor, and sequentially transmits the read image data to an external device, when image reading operation of an image reading unit suspends, the relative position between the image and the image sensor is displaced to a predetermined position before the suspended position of the image reading operation, and reading operation restarts from the displaced position.